

NCADV Honors Domestic Violence Victims Killed by Their Abusers

"Remember My Name" Poster Compiles Domestic Violence Victims Killed in 2015

National Coalition Against Domestic Violence (NCADV) is officially releasing their 2015 "Remember My Name" poster, which honors over 300 victims of domestic violence who were killed by their abuser last year. The poster's release is timed for release in October, which is Domestic Violence Awareness Month, which gives organizations and individuals a way to honor and remember those who were killed because of domestic violence. Posters can be purchased from the NCADV website here.

NCADV, in conjunction with Ms. Magazine, started this project in 1994 to create a national registry of names to increase public awareness of domestic violence deaths. Since then, NCADV has continued to collect information on incidents of women and others who have been killed by an intimate partner and produces a poster each year for Domestic Violence Awareness Month listing the names of those submitted. NCADV is creating as complete a registry as possible of women, children and men who have lost their lives due to domestic violence. "The Remember My Name project is meaningful to family and loved ones of those lost and for me personally, as a survivor, I am moved beyond words each year when seeing the names. It reminds me and the NCADV team, we still have so much work to do. The poster is a beautiful memorial but also a reminder that we are still losing people to domestic violence and it must stop."

Domestic violence is prevalent in every community and affects all people regardless of age, socioeconomic status, sexual orientation, gender, race, religion, or nationality. In the United States, an average of 20 people are physically abused by intimate partners every minute, which equates to more than 10 million abuse victims each year.

About National Coalition Against Domestic Violence

The National Coalition Against Domestic Violence (NCADV) is the voice of victims and survivors and works as the catalyst for changing society to have zero tolerance for domestic violence. NCADV does this by affecting public policy, increasing understanding of the impact of domestic violence, and providing programs and education that drive change.
