Creating a Military-Civilian Coordinated Community Response

Date: Thursday, June 4, 2015
Time: 1:00 PM - 2:30 PM (Central Time)

The Battered Women's Justice Project is pleased to announce a webinar on Military-Civilian Coordinated Community Response (CCR).

When communities and the military do not work together on their response to intimate partner violence (IPV), gaps exist in the interagency response that victims may fall through and perpetrators can exploit. An effective Military-Civilian CCR can address these issues increasing both safety and accountability. After an overview of the CCR model (i.e., the Duluth Model), the webinar will explain what a Military-Civilian CCR is and the process of organizing and building one. It will then discuss the OVW-funded Military-Civilian Coordinated Community Response Demonstration Project to include an in-depth analysis of the challenges and lessons-learned from the project.

Whether you are a victim advocate in a military Family Advocacy Program (FAP), an advocate in a local battered women's shelter, or a practitioner in an established civilian coordinated community response (CCR) who wants to build a new relationship between your community and a local military installation, this webinar is for you.

Presenters: Brian Clubb, J.D., Coordinator, Military & Veterans Advocacy Program, and Connie Sponsler-Garcia, Training and Technical Assistance Director, Battered Women's Justice Project.

This webinar will: Provide an overview of the elements, framework, and processes of a successful CCR; explain how military context and environment affect domestic violence cases and the Military-Civilian CCR design and process; explain what challenges exist to building a Military-Civilian CCR, and; describe the lessons learned from two demonstration project sites.
