Locating Mental Health & Substance Abuse Supports for Survivors: A Reference Sheet for Domestic Violence Advocates

As a domestic violence advocate, you may be working to support survivors on issues related to mental health and substance abuse. This document contains resources that you can use to locate additional supports for survivors who are experiencing mental health or substance abuse conditions. When connecting a survivor with these services, keep in mind that not all service providers are trained in trauma or domestic violence. These resources should supplement rather than replace domestic violence advocacy.

Definitions

- Warm lines: Warm lines focus on providing emotional support. They may or may not be equipped to provide crisis counseling.
- Crisis lines: Crisis lines provide support to people who are in emotional crisis, including people who may be at risk of suicide. Some crisis lines also provide emotional support to people who are not in crisis.
- Peer support lines: Peer support lines are staffed by people who are in recovery themselves. Some peer support lines are also peer run, while others may not be. Peer support lines may operate as warm lines or as crisis lines.
- Consumer: A consumer is someone who identifies as using or having used mental health services.

Where to Look

Warmlines
http://www.warmline.org/
- Description: This website lists peer support warm lines by state. Information about each line, such as hours of operation and scope of services provided, is included. Lines that accept national calls appear in red text.
