

From Cell Phones to Facebook: Technology Safety in a Digital World

A Webinar Series for Victim Service Agencies

The Safety Net Project at the National Network to End Domestic Violence is presenting a 5-part series on technology safety in a digital world. While each webinar will focus in-depth on a certain subset of technology and can stand alone, together, the series offer a comprehensive understanding of technology abuse as well as best practices for agencies in using technology to enhance their services for victims.

Webinar 1: Common Technology Misuse & Safety Planning

January 29, 2013

2:00 PM ET – 3:30 PM ET

Presented by: Safety Net Project at the National Network to End Domestic Violence

The first webinar will focus on common technologies used by abusers, survivors and agencies, such as phones, faxes, computers and cameras. These technologies are integral to our daily lives—they help us communicate, stay connected, and make our lives better and easier. Because they are so common, they are easily misused by abusers to harass and stalk. However, because they are so integral, we need to understand how to safety plan with survivors so we can use these technologies safely. Victim service agencies also need to understand how they can use these technologies safely and confidentially as well.
