

Remember My Name Memorial Project

The National Coalition Against Domestic Violence (NCADV), in conjunction with Ms. Magazine, started the Remember My Name[©] project in 1994 to create a national registry of names of those who have lost their lives to domestic violence. Since then, NCADV has continued to collect information on incidents of people who have been killed by an intimate partner and produces a poster each year for Domestic Violence Awareness Month listing the names of those submitted to the project. To date (summer 2009), over 7,753 people* have been memorialized through the project.

*This number does not reflect the total number of people that have been killed to date as a result of domestic violence nationally or internationally and is only a collection of names provided to us through our submission process for the Remember My Name project.
